Pub. No. 2002/0081364 A1
Balsamic Sauce for Alimentary Use, with a basis of Balsamic Vinegar of Modena
Examiner: Nina Bhat

Dear Commissioner and Examiner Bhat:

This letter is submitted as an objection to the patent application number 09/897,986 first published on June 27, 2002. According to the USPTO records, a non-final rejection was mailed on August 9, 2002. Please consider this objection as if submitted prior to the publication of the patent application.

The claims and thus the entire patent application should be rejected and never issued as there is no unique invention. Further, balsamic vinegar has been in public use for many years. If such a patent is permitted to be issued, it will have a stifling effect on the marketplace as the numerous companies and distributors of this product will no longer be in a position to sell the product which has been sold for over 10 years.

Enclosed please find photocopies of labels, websites which list similar products and product descriptions for items already in commerce, sold for many years, which use balsamic vinegar as an ingredient or are themselves a balsamic sauce/glaze containing the same ingredients listed in the patent. These objections are filed on behalf of Taormina Sales Company, Inc., an importer and manufacturers representative for Italian vinegars. Issuing a patent for balsamic vinegar will affect not only Taormina Sales Company, Inc. but all distributors, manufacturers, suppliers and even chefs.

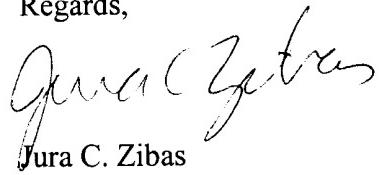

Below is listed an objection corresponding to each claim in the application number listed above.

1. Balsamic vinegar is a common food product thus, consequently all sauces using this product can be described as a balsamic vinegar used for alimentary use. The claimed product is not unique but rather, a variation of an ingredient, balsamic vinegar, which has been in use for many years, and is marketed not only as a vinegar but also as an ingredient in dressings and sauces. Such a claim, if allowed, would affect not only the manufacturers and marketers of existing food products, but also any individual who publishes, demonstrates or formulates a food product or recipe containing balsamic vinegar.

2. The addition of thickening agents and sugar in a formula containing balsamic vinegar is not unique. Thickening agents are often used to give the final product consistency and sugars are used to give the product a sweet flavor. Such a claim, if allowed, would affect not only the manufacturers and marketers of existing food products, but also any individual who publishes, demonstrates or formulates a food product or recipe containing balsamic vinegar.
3. As in number 2, the addition of a thickening agent based on Xanthum (Xanthan) gum and modified starch is not unique and are common additives used to give commercially produced sauces their consistency and flavor. Such a claim, if allowed, would affect not only the manufacturers and marketers of existing food products, but also any individual who publishes, demonstrates or formulates a food product or recipe containing balsamic vinegar.
4. As in number 2 and 3, the addition of sugars is commonly used in formulas for sauces to give the final food product a particular flavor profile and thickness. Such a claim, if allowed, would affect not only the manufacturers and marketers of existing food products, but also any individual who publishes, demonstrates or formulates a food product or recipe containing balsamic vinegar.
5. The use of flavor bases in food products is common in the manufacture of sauces in order to impart that particular flavor or aroma to the sauce being created. The use of flavors in sauces made with balsamic vinegar is not unique. Such a claim, if allowed, would affect not only the manufacturers and marketers of existing food products, but also any individual who publishes, demonstrates or formulates a food product or recipe containing balsamic vinegar.
6. As in number 5, specifically meat flavor, pepper flavor, oregano flavor and fish flavor are commonly used in balsamic vinegar sauces already produced commercially and in recipes when cooking. Such a claim, if allowed, would affect not only the manufacturers and marketers of existing food products, but also any individual who publishes, demonstrates or formulates a food product or recipe containing balsamic vinegar.
7. As in number 5, flavorings of rosemary, onion and garlic are commonly used in balsamic vinegar sauces already produced commercially and in recipes prepared for the public. Such a claim, if allowed, would affect not only the manufacturers and marketers of existing food products, but also any individual who publishes, demonstrates or formulates a food product or recipe containing balsamic vinegar.
8. Balsamic sauce that contains 40% balsamic vinegar, sugars, modified starch and xantham gum is not unique. It is only a variation of a sauce made from generic ingredients. Further, the objections listed above are applicable as this claim repeats and combines the claims listed in numbers 1 through 7. Such a claim, if allowed, would affect not only the manufacturers and marketers of existing food products, but also any individual who publishes, demonstrates or formulates a food product or recipe containing balsamic vinegar.
9. As in number 8, the quantity of balsamic vinegar used in a sauce relates directly to the flavor profile of the product. There are products which have been in commerce for many years which have this quantity of balsamic vinegar in the final product. Thus, this product is not unique. Such a claim, if allowed, would affect not only the manufacturers and marketers of existing food products, but also any individual who publishes, demonstrates or formulates a food product or recipe containing balsamic vinegar.

For the reasons listed above, again, we reiterate our objections to the allowance of these claims. If you have any questions or require further information, please do not hesitate to contact me.

Re: Appl. No. 09/897,986
Pub. No. 2002/0081364A1
Balsamic Sauce for Alimenray Use, with a basis of Balsamic Vinegar of Modena

Dear Ms. Bhat:

As a follow up to our phone conversations and emails, I have enclosed the documentation you requested regarding first use dates for Balsamic Vinegar. Further, it is my understanding Colvita responded to you directly.

Enclosed is the following documentation to show first use dates:

1. Annie's Balsamic Vinaigrette, first use July 1989 by Annie's Naturals. Date of first use information provided by Annie Christopher, owner. A copy of her ledger recording the first sale is enclosed.
2. Silver Palate Balsamic Country Salad Splash, first use June 6, 1991 by Silver Palate. Date of first use information provided by Tom Buro. A copy of an invoice to Silver Palate from the co-packer is included.
3. Acetifico Marcel Denigris of Balmy, first use of October 24, 2001. Invoice to Carl Evensens is enclosed showing first use date.
4. Wishbone Balsamic Viniagrette, first use June 1989. Date of first use information provided by Helena Dane of Taormina Sales. A copy of a TJ Lipton purchase order for the product is enclosed.
5. Denigris Rustico Dressing, first use date of September 2000 by Acetifico Denigris. A copy of the invoice to Yamaya Corporation is enclosed.

6. Balsamic Glaze, first use date of January 2000 by De Nigris. Copies of recipe documentation, shipping labels and ledger of shipment of samples are enclosed

Further, we discussed during a telephone call patent number 5,565,233 entitled "White balsamic vinegar and process for producing white balsamic vinegar." Based on the information provided to you, clearly, the claims in this patent were not unique and the patent should not have been granted. Unfortunately, the competitors in this industry were not aware of the patent and did not learn of the existence of the patent until several years after it was issued. The white balsamic vinegar patent has always interfered with the business of other manufacturers and distributors who were selling this in the market prior to the date Alfred Alessi applied for the patent. Thus, is it possible to request a re-examination of the 5,565,233 patent at this time?

If you have any questions, please feel free to give me a call. We look forward to receiving notification of your final decision on this patent matter.

Regards,

Jura C. Zibas

This program designs a series of quality checks that can be used to monitor the quality of the data collected by the surveyor. The quality checks are based on the following principles:

- The surveyor's data is checked against a set of quality criteria.
- If the surveyor's data fails one or more of the quality checks, the surveyor is prompted to correct the data.
- The surveyor is given feedback on the quality of their data, including a summary of the errors found and suggestions for improvement.

This "minimum" definition is determined by the minimum number of days required to satisfy the requirements.

CONFECTIONER'S SUGAR

Confectioner's sugar is also called powdered sugar, and icing sugar in the United Kingdom. White granulated sugar is very finely ground, sifted and mixed with about 1% to 3% starch, cornstarch, or calcium phosphate to keep it dry and to prevent caking.

10X (ultrafine or superfine) is the finest powder and what you will find on your supermarket shelves. Bakers and confectioners are the only ones who have use for most other grades such as 4X (fine) and 6X (very fine). If you have no confectioner's sugar, you can put some granulated (regular) sugar in a blender with a pinch of cornstarch and process it.
